TWENTY-SIX MINERS KILLED IN BRITISH COAL MINE EXPLOSION

Fire Raging In Shaft Two Miles Beneath Sea, Hampers Rescue Work; Sixteen Bodies Recovered; 200 Managed To Reach Surface

WHITE HAVEN, Cumberland, England, Jan. 30.—Twenty-six miners lost their lives in an explosion in the Haig coal mine two miles beneath the sea, according to an official casualty list compiled today.

Sixteen bodies had been recovered this morning. Five more were located. Five additional miners were missing and officially listed as dead.

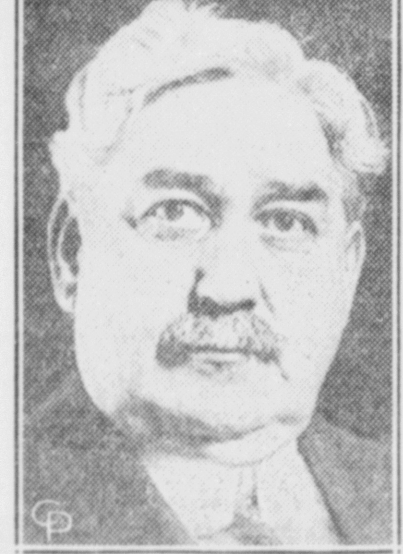

Fire raged in the mine shaft, hampering the task of locating the missing miners.

The blast occurred just as the night shift was preparing to leave the mine. Of the entire shift of forty one miners working in the shaft where the explosion occurred only three succeeded in making their own way to the surface. All were suffering from gas poisoning. Approximately 200 miners working in other shafts managed to reach the surface before the gas released by the explosion reached them.

Thirty nine lives were lost in an explosion in the same mine in 1922.

INDICT NINETEEN

REQUEST OF HEFLIN FOR INVESTIGATION IS ROCKING SENATE

Battle Lines Drawn As Proposal Now Becomes Issue

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—In a tangle of conflicting political aims, Republican and Democratic ranks of the senate were rocked with dissension today over the apparently simple request of the turbulent Senator J. Thomas Heflin for an inquiry into his charge of fraud in the recent Alabama senatorial contest when he was defeated by John H. Bankhead.

The request approached a major political issue, as Republican and Democratic leaders looked upon it as furnishing dangerous fuel for the 1932 presidential election. It likewise involved personal angles, shattering party lines and arousing passion where cordiality usually prevails.

Administration leaders generally favored the inquiry, because its Democratic party in the south of the senate was the medium through which the inquiry could be made. It was to Alfred E. Smith, for this reason, those Democrats who were faithful in 1928, opposed it to a man. The issue, found the Republicans, insurgents fighting their old guard colleagues, because they saw in the maneuvering a personal angle in 1932.

Heflin started the storm by sponsoring a resolution proposing an inquiry by the Nye campaign fund committee. Sen. Moses (R) of New Hampshire, countered with a substitute, giving the inquiry to the standard senate elections committee. Heflin declared the Nye committee could do the task cheaper and more quickly. Moves countered by publishing the expense account of the Nye committee. At that, the fireworks became general.

A summary of battle lines found this confusing lineup: Old guard Republicans, favoring an inquiry because of its possible political advantages, but opposing the Nye committee as the medium. Loyal Democratic leaders opposing any inquiry, as likely to reopen 1928 wounds.

Insurgent Republicans favoring an inquiry by the Nye committee, viewing any successful attack on Nye as endangering their own political future.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, and Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, leading the fight against Heflin, because of their friendship for Smith.

Senator Moses (R) of New Hampshire and Senator Caraway (D) of Arkansas, united forces to oppose an inquiry by Nye, because of enmity for the North Dakotan. Moses favored an inquiry by the regular committee but Caraway opposed it.

Senator Black (D) of Alabama, fighting Heflin in self defense, because of the latter's apparent intention to oppose him in 1932.

Senator Norris, insurgent leader, favoring a Nye inquiry, because Heflin was punished for bolting. He too was a bolter in 1928.

Out of this confusing jumble of purposes, it was uncertain Heflin would get an inquiry. If he does, it undoubtedly will be conducted by the regularly controlled elections committee. Such a prospect puzzled loyal Democrats, since they feel their own cause would be more tolerantly handled by the Nye committee than by a regular Republican committee. But their principal concern was to block any inquiry.

BAR WILL CONSIDER RAISING NUMBER OF OHIO COURT JUDGES

Meeting Draws Many
Lawyers; Bulkeley
Is Speaker

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 30.—The third session of the mid-winter meeting of the Ohio State Bar Association convened here today as hundreds of attorneys and judges from all parts of the state assembled in a general session to hear addresses by United States Senator Robert J. Bulkeley and John M. Vorys, former state director of aeronautics.

Senator Bulkeley gave a short talk to the delegates on "Some Impressions of the Senate in Action," giving a brief account of the senior legislative body's functioning. Vorys' address was entitled, "The Law of the Air."

Prior to the speeches, the lawyers heard the reports of several committees and held a brief business session.

At the opening session of the association Thursday the organization took under consideration the advisability of increasing the number of judges of the Ohio supreme court, and providing each with a secretary, preferably a recent graduate of a law school recommended by the dean of the school.

Several members voiced dissatisfaction of the present number of judges on the supreme court because of the large number of cases which have been refused a hearing by the high court due to the impossibility to hear all the appeals.

The association unanimously approved a resolution asking that a study be made to find some way in which to aid the judges. It was suggested that by the secretary plan, an aid to the judge could read and digest for him the entire case before it was to be heard in court.

Tendency of "legislative efforts to operate courts instead of judicial justice being administered," was deplored Thursday in an address by Judge Thomas W. Shelton, of Norfolk, Va. He declared that the remedy for restoring faith and confidence in courts is not in legislation but in the modernization of our system of administration of justice.

At Thursday's two sessions, the association heard addresses by Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall, of the state supreme court; Smith W. Beatty, Columbus attorney; and George B. Harris, prominent Cleveland lawyer.

The delegates this afternoon were scheduled to receive the reports of all important committees of the association. The annual dinner will be held this evening with addresses being given by Phil S. Bradford, of Columbus, president of the bar association; Governor George White; John J. Parker, judge of the United States district court of appeals of the fourth district of North Carolina, and Thomas C. Guthrie, former judge of Charlotte, N. C.

CITY TO EMPLOY ENGINEER

EXPERT WILL PROBE ELECTRIC BIDS TO DETERMINE BETTER

Commission Hears Both Sides; Will Delay
Verdict

Trial of the troublesome light and power question was resumed before City Commission at its recess meeting Thursday night with no indications the case will be given to the jury in the near future.

Evidence in support of the relative merits of the two propositions under consideration—those of Fairbanks, Morse and Co. and The Dayton Power and Light Co.—was presented to the commission by representatives of both bidders for the Xenia franchise and contract in an effort to provide the commission with a true picture of the advantages of each proposal.

After more than two hours of discussion, pro and con, with members of commission listening patiently and attempting to digest details of both proposals, the commission, on motion of Commissioner I. S. Dines, voted unanimously to authorize City Manager M. C. Smith to employ a competent engineer to devise into both propositions and make a report of his findings.

Commission, on suggestion of both companies, indicated no hasty action will be taken in definitely deciding for or against either proposal, the light and power question being one which, they feel, calls for mature consideration.

An array of executives of the D. P. and L. Co., including Frank M. Tate, president of the company; J. C. Matthews, vice president in charge of commercial development; Judge E. P. Matthews, general counsel; and O. H. Hutchins, vice president and general manager, was on hand to present the case of the company which has served Xenia consumers with electricity for the last twenty years.

The opposite camp—Fairbanks, Morse and Co.—was represented by Lewis C. Rader, of Oklahoma, field development manager; A. R. Stacey, Dayton, company expert; and Darlington, Ohio, Charles L. L. Each of whom discussed some phase of the controversy.

Meanwhile, local merchants and citizens, who thronged the commission chamber, gave their undivided attention to arguments on both sides, secretly of the opinion the consumers ultimately stand to benefit to some extent regardless of which proposal is accepted.

When the entire matter had been thrashed out from almost every conceivable angle, Dr. Frank M. Chambliss, president of the commission, thanked officials of both companies for appearing at the meeting, and invited them to marshal their arguments and be on hand again when the commission meets Friday, February 13.

The only other business transacted at the meeting was to reappoint Ed Wood and Attorney W. L. Moore for six-year terms as members of the Civil Service Commission, and Joseph Santmyer and George Galloway as trustees of the interest and sinking fund, their terms having expired.

THREE PRISONERS AWAIT EXECUTION

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 30.—Numbered at the thought of their black fate at nightfall tonight, three men arose hopelessly from their bunks in Ohio Penitentiary at dawn today to live their last hours—hours that will be all too short.

Tonight, the trio—Fred Massa, Kenneth McCartney, and Earl Stess—will walk, one after the other, to their doom of death in the electric chair at the prison and pay the penalty for the murder of Ralph Wilcox, Gallion filling station attendant, during a holdup on June 27.

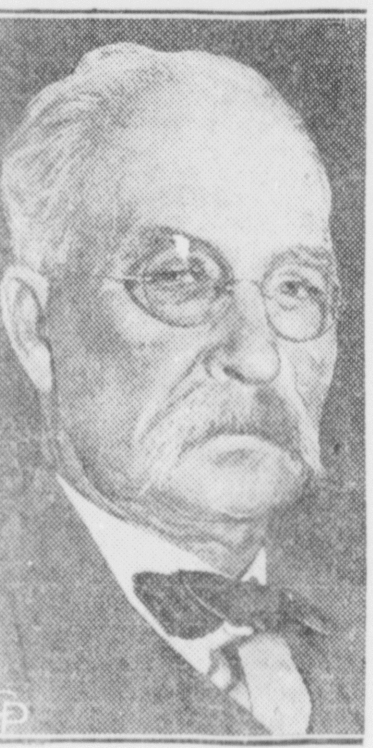

Only executive clemency stood between the three men and death. The state clemency board, announced yesterday it would give a decision sometime today on the appeals of the trio.

The executions of the three men will climax sensational careers of crime which began with truancy and ended in a whirlwind of abduction, burglary, holdups, rape and murder, according to their police records.

So Says Edgar Lee Masters, The "Modern Walt Whitman" Who Sees World War Coming

By DAVID P. SENTNER

(Copyright, 1931, by I. N. S.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—"This is the age of idiocy," "This is the age of brass and gas."

"There will be another world war within twenty-five years—it will be a peach."

"The Middlewest of pioneer days has been metropolitanized and standardized."

"It is time America turned to cultivating its mind instead of its material comfort."

Edgar Lee Masters, famous American poet and author, called the modern Walt Whitman, looks at life without blinking. He speaks as he thinks, let the chips rain where they may.

The author of the "Spoon River Anthology" in an exclusive interview with International News Service today

NINETEEN INJURED IN SERIOUS NEW YORK FIRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Nineteen persons, including twelve firemen, were injured today in a fire which swept Lincoln Square Arcade Building.

Thousands from the theater district of Broadway flocked to the scene of the fire and traffic was blocked for hours.

Firemen rescued twenty-three tenants, including a mother and her baby from the blazing building. The loss was set at $500,000.

Ten firemen were trapped on the flaming fourth floor of the building when a fire escape platform collapsed. Five of them were plunged through charred floors to the basement. They were dragged out from the debris, all injured and bruised. Several were believed to have sustained internal injuries.

The other trapped firemen crawled to safety, making their way to the roof where they were rescued.

The fire started from an unknown manner in a building adjoining the Loew's Lincoln Square Theater, one of the oldest in the city. The theater was soon blackened and smoked.

It was said for the first time in the history of New York the fire signal 9-9 was given, summoning aid from the five boroughs.

FEMALE DOMINANCE OF AMERICA VIEWED AS WORLD MENACE

European Publicists Say Civilization Is Threatened

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—A new "American danger" confronts the world and has thrown civilization into the greatest crisis in history, in the view of an increasing number of European publicists.

This "danger," according to these publicists, is not so much the alleged dollar-mania of the Americans, nor their mechanical civilization, but the dominance of the American females of the species over the male.

This dominance, characterized as being an "absolutely unique phenomenon among cultured nations," threatens to spread, these publicists warn. According to the "Deutsche Zeitung," it threatens to "feminize" the entire world and therewith cause the downfall of the occident.

"The Deutsche Zeitung" demands, therefore, relentless warfare against American feminism. Furthermore, it allots Germany a new mission to save the world by the development of the German male.

Apparently this new German male is not to be exactly a superman. But he is to have a "positive attitude toward life and fate" and above all, of course, he will not bow to women.

"Compromise is impossible," the paper exclaims.

Public attention to the so-called woman's rule in America has been aroused in Germany by a book entitled "New York Without Rouge," by Dr. Gerhard Venzmer, a physician.

Dr. Venzmer propounds the theory that neither scarcity of women during colonial times, nor the influence of predominantly male teachers, nor other reasons usually advanced, really explain the exceptional position of women in America.

Rather, he believes, that some organic influences are at work in North America to give the whole psychology of the North American male "a touch of masochism," which makes him submit meekly to female domination.

The "Deutsche Zeitung" and other German papers, however, are not so much interested in the physiological causes but rather in the spiritual results of this situation.

Removal of the Donges Drug Store from its location at Detroit and Second Sts., in the Flynn Bldg., to the Donges Bldg., 59 S. Detroit St., and enlargement and expansion of the business is announced by W. H. Donges, proprietor.

Simultaneously he is announcing that his son, Ralph H. Donges, optometrist and pharmacist, will open an optical shop in connection with the drug store in its new location and father and son will be associated in business. The removal will take place about February 10.

R. H. Donges is now located at Akron where he is managing the optical department of the O'Neil Department Store. He is a graduate of Xenia Central High School in the class of 1921, was a student at Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., in 1922-23 and graduated from Ohio State University in pharmacy-chemistry with a bachelor of science degree in 1926.

He received his degree of bachelor of science in applied optics from the same university in 1928 and obtained practical experience in relief work in Columbus in the meantime. After leaving college he became associated with the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, employed in industrial eyesight conservation work until taking charge of the O'Neil optical department. While at O. S. U. he became a member of Phi Delta Chi professional fraternity and also of Delta Upsilon.

The change of location will remove a landmark from the Detroit and Second St., corner where Mr. Donges has been for many years.

SCHOOL CHILDREN INJURED IN CRASH

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 30.—A thorough investigation of the school bus accident at North Jackson, Pa., in which thirty-five school children were injured, will be demanded immediately, members of the North Beaver school board stated today.

Reports received here from the Jameson Memorial Hospital at New Castle, Pa., revealed that two of the students were in a serious condition as a result of injuries suffered in the accident. They are Matilda Memeth, 11, of Enon Valley, and Margaret Seleta, 13, of Petersburg.

The accident occurred when R. W. Pharris, the bus driver, attempted to pass a large truck on the road. The truck swerved against the bus and both machines landed in the ditch. Other pupils in the bus sustained minor injuries, consisting of cuts and bruises.

MARINE COMMANDER MUST FACE INQUIRY IN MUSSOLINI CASE

Apology Is Cabled, President Insisted On Prompt Action

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Focused squarely in an international spotlight, Major General Smedley D. Butler, awaited the pleasure of an unnamed court martial today as officialdom speculated on what fate was in store for him.

The colorful marine commander at Quantico, Va., must face inquiry into an incident which forced this government for the first time to offer apology to a foreign power for remarks of one of its officials. Butler's "explanation" of his famous "Mussolini" speech in Philadelphia last week, was followed shortly by extension of a note of "regret" at the incident to Italy by Secretary of State Stimson.

Butler was ordered to appear before a court martial, arrested, and relieved of his post.

While charges have not been drawn against the marine veteran, it was understood the judge advocate general of the navy would base them on one of two rather flexible provisions of navy regulations prohibiting "conduct unbecoming an officer," and "conduct to prejudice good order and discipline."

Secretary of the Navy Adams plans to announce the personnel of the court martial within the next few days. At least half the court must be officers of equal rank to Butler, under service regulations, so the court martial will probably draw the highest ranking officials in the navy. No decision as to whether the court will sit in Washington or Quantico has been made.

Officials at the Italian embassy announced the state department's note of regret had been immediately cabled to Premier Mussolini in Italy. They declared a reply was expected today or tomorrow. While the ambassador could not speak for H. Duce he indicated the state department action was entirely satisfactory. Italian officials declared from the first they were uninterested in the punitive phase of the Butler case, but were concerned in officially establishing as false the story Butler reported from Philadelphia.

Butler's "explanation" of the address admitted as substantially

INQUIRY INTO SHOOTING ENDS

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Members of the board of inquiry into the coast guard firing on the Canadian schooner Josephine E. in which the craft's captain, William Chast, was fatally injured, ended their investigation today. The board's findings were sent to the commander of the coast guard service in Washington and a public report was expected to follow in a week or ten days.

The board members declined to comment on a re-enactment of the shooting off the coast here late yesterday, when the schooner with full speed ahead and the coast guard cutter, which fired on her with a one pounder, in her wake, rushed out to sea.

The dramatic test race was made after Boatwain Carl Schmidt, commander of the American cutter, had testified at the inquiry that he fired on the schooner when he thought his boat was being outdistanced. His impression, however, that the Canadian boat was faster than the American, was not shown in the test, as the coast guard craft outdistanced the Josephine E.

CALDWELL, O., Jan. 30.—Leaving her two children behind, Mrs. Ida Wickham today prepared to enter the women's reformatory at Marysville to begin serving a life sentence for the murder of her husband, Clarence Wickham, World War veteran and former school teacher.

Rather than stand trial on a first degree murder charge, Mrs. Wickham accepted an opportunity to plead guilty to a charge of second degree murder yesterday. Judge C. O. Dye accepted the woman's plea and sentenced her to a life term in the reformatory.

GUN VICTIM IS FOUND IN AUTO

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Children romping about an abandoned automobile suddenly halted when one lad, entering the rear door, stumbled over the body of a man whom police today believed was either a gang victim or a bandit shot in the course of a spectacular department store robbery.

Fingerprint records disclosed that the dead man was George Smith, 34, who had a record as a convicted burglar. He had been shot in the abdomen.

From the man's description and the location of the bullet wound police believed him to be one of the five bandits who on Monday staged the $19,000 department store robbery in which three persons were shot. One of the bandits was shot in the abdomen and was dragged to a car by his companions.

Findings of a partially filled five gallon can of alcohol beside the body led police to consider the possibility that Smith had been slain in a war among alcohol peddlers.

VICTIM IS MOVED

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Jan. 30.—Edwin K. Nelson, who was wounded by one of six bandits who held up and robbed several passengers on a Big Four Pullman two weeks ago, was enroute to his home in Tampa, Fla., today. He was removed from the local hospital on a cot. Nelson was shot when he was awakened during the sensational train robbery and failed to heed the commands of the gunmen to stop shouting.

FLIGHT DELAYED
LISBON, Jan. 30.—Further engine tests being necessary the giant German flying boat DO-X, will not hop off on her flight to South America until Saturday morning. It was announced here today. The flight was to have started this morning.

AN UNFRIENDLY CHURCH
Just before the service, the minister called a church officer to him and said, "Do you see the man in the back of the church with his hat on? Please speak to him about it."

The officer went back and said, "Do you know that you have your hat on?"

His reply was, "Thank goodness! I thought it would work. I have been in this church for the last five Sundays and no one has spoken to me and I thought I would force someone to speak to me somehow."

PRINCE WILL NOT MARRY COMMONER

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 30.—Prince Lennart, Duke of Smaland, grandson of King Gustave of Sweden, will not marry Miss Karin Nisswandt, a commoner, it was learned today. Their engagement was reported a few days ago.

King Gustave has refused to sanction the marriage on the official ground that Prince Lennart is too young. He will be 22 years old on May 8. Unofficially, however, it is reported that the king's real objection to the union is the fact that Miss Nisswandt's family caused the report of the engagement to be published before the royal assent had been received.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

In the beginning was Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of men.—St. John 1, 1-4.

WICKERSHAM REPORT

The report in Washington that the Wickersham commission "suppressed the most sensational testimony in its possession bearing upon the widespread nullification of the prohibition law" doesn't seem to us to be of very much importance. The commission was not appointed to engage in a muckraking expedition for the purpose of providing the country with sensations or politicians with campaign arguments. The business committed to the body was, as we understand it, the job of arriving at a considered conclusion regarding the crime problem and the prohibition problem in this country and to make recommendations about what ought to be done.

The members have performed this work, presumably to the best of their abilities, and if the result has not seemed very satisfactory, that is because the task presented complexities that made a unanimous conclusion by 11 persons with varying temperaments, backgrounds and preconceived notions, extremely difficult. There is no reason to suppose that the failure was a result of lack of disposition to hear facts or weigh them.

Undoubtedly, after 10 months the committee has "a vast mass of detailed reports on the prevalence of rum running, bootlegging and local manufacture of liquor, and the virtually complete want of effort on the part of the states to enforce the law." But detailed publication of that sort of thing would give the country no information it now lacks. Airing all the details would do much like reciting the records of hospitals and of the private practice of physicians to prove that people get sick and sometimes die.

The general situation is well known. The committee tried to find out what ought to be done about it. In reporting back on that point they produced a good sized volume and if the public reads that, it will probably get all the information it will be able to digest.

THE OLD REMEDIES

When the country has business troubles, there is a tendency to run to the government for help. But people have to help themselves for the most part. It may seem commonplace to talk about the plain old fashioned remedies of hard work and thrift and resourcefulness, but these are the forces on which people have to depend. The government can help here and there, but people must largely solve their own problems.

A great many persons could help themselves, if they would get out of some rut into which some have drifted. They keep on doing the same old thing in the same old way, and they fail to realize that the world has changed, and that most forms of business and work have to modify their methods.

The thing for them to do is to wake up a bit, study their own methods, what their competitors are doing, what the people who use their goods or accept their services, desire. Some concerns that have done so have discovered that their methods were not up-to-date. By changes here and there to adapt their product or work to the present needs, they were able to please many former customers and gain new ones.

Many concerns in Ohio that complain of poor business today, could get much of it back, if they would thus make a special effort to render their services attractive. They would thereby tempt many dollars out of their hoarded hiding places, and help start general business going.

Employers and employees must co-operate to get these results. When the workers to their part, and make a real effort to please and turn out superior work, it becomes easier to sell goods and services, and business improves. More energy, more effort to make good, will help remedy matters.

JUMPING OVER A STICK

A man said to himself:
"I'm afraid I'm getting old. I didn't enjoy that party as much as I thought I would. I was bored and I got sleepy early and wanted to go home before midnight. . . . Young people seem so much younger than they used to be. They chatter so much and they don't seem to say much either. . . . I seem to need more sleep, too, and I hate to get out of bed these cold mornings, and nothing could persuade me to take a cold shower."

"I hurt my foot, too, and I insisted it was a stone bruise." It was suggested that it was really chilblains, and I was quite angry at the suggestion. Of course it WASN'T chilblains—they come from poor circulation in the feet, and there's nothing wrong with my circulation. . . . I think of my childhood more than I used to, and I've been told that's a sign of age creeping on. I hope not. . . . And I find I take birthdays more seriously now. Don't greet them so joyously nowadays, wish other people wouldn't notice them, either. That must be a sign of something or other, too. . . . Perhaps I AM getting older."

The man had a little stick in his hand, and he began to think about it. It stirred a memory. When he was younger, he could hold a short stick in his two hands—and jump through it, easily. Wonder if he could do it now. Wonder if he dared to try it. It would prove something or other also. So he said to his wife: "I used to be able to jump through a stick. Watch me and see if I can still do it."

He held that stick in his two hands, breathed quickly, gathered his energies, jumped—and there he was, holding the stick behind him. He'd Done It! . . . The first time he tried it! . . . And his wife remarked: "You can't imagine how relieved you look!"

Why shouldn't he have looked relieved? He wasn't as old as he thought he was. He'd jumped clean out of his skin of depression and into his youthful illusion again. He could still jump over a stick—and that was something!

But you needn't be asking who the man was! It's a secret, and you might laugh at the silliness of it. . . . Though I don't see why—because you've done silly things, too.

Bo-Broadway

—By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE—

NEW YORK—Lee "Harlemian" Posner, one of Tammany Town's army of night club press agents, was so busy he didn't get around to sending out his New Year greetings till about a week ago.

Receiving a card wishing you a happy and a prosperous new year somewhere around Lincoln's birthday is a change in the way of variety that has much to commend it.

Let's hope it becomes popular. We've long needed some starker system to relieve the pressure of good-will generated in the last week of each December.

Spreading this Oh-Let's-Be-Joyful, and I-Wish-You-Well stuff in judicious outlays at stated intervals through the year would be a decided improvement over the existing state of things.

Speaking of "Harlemian"
He has the reputation of being a consistent loser at poker and paying his losses on the spot.

I may be prejudiced, but my idea is that we betides a country when a man can achieve a reputation by the mere fact that he settles his gambling debts promptly and in full.

When the youngsters began to kick over tradition, one of the things that toppled with a deafening crash was the conservative prejudice affecting the sacredness of gambling. I. O. U's.

Sitting in a game in the old days knowing you couldn't pay if you lost, simply wasn't done.

That, of course, was part of the Mauve Decade—The Gas Light Era. Today, among a certain class in Tammany Town, settling in full with the banker at the conclusion of a poker session qualifies a man as a Zap.

It's almost as bad as going on living with the woman you originally married.

GETTING THE ECHO!

EXTRA SESSION PROBABLE UNLESS TWO-THIRDS VOTE TO GAG TALKING SOLONS

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—Except by adopting unusual means of rushing proceedings it is practically impossible now for congress to complete its absolutely necessary work by the date on which the present body of lawmakers must adjourn—March 4, at noon, according to the calendar, which is to say, at the end of the legislative day referred to as March 3, as congressionally reckoned.

If any of this work remains undone then, President Hoover will have to call an extra session to begin about the middle of May at the latest. Once called, it may last all summer and fall.

Perhaps, however, the legislators will do something abnormal, to finish their task, after a fashion, just short of the deadline.

Steered by the president, Uncle Sam's government could run almost indefinitely under its own momentum, with no congressional help whatever, but for one thing—Only congress can vote the money to pay its bills.

This is the essential work which it remains for the solons on Capitol Hill to attend to before quitting.

The army, the navy, the department, the federal court, all the remainder of the government machinery—are provided for up to and including June 30. On July 1 a new fiscal year starts. From then on, not a cent will be available unless congress has appropriated it in the meantime.

There is a bulabulaboo concerning these financial allowances biennially, at just about this stage of the game.

It doesn't occur every year, because it is only on alternate years that congress is bound to adjourn on a fixed date, but whenever its adjournment schedule is arbitrarily settled for it in advance, a jam is virtually inevitable.

As a matter of actual fact, President Hoover was talked by Senator Borah into calling the Seventy-first congress into extra session in the spring of 1929, to tinker with farm relief and the tariff, but otherwise it would not have met until its regular constitutional first Monday in December that year.

It did meet in December, anyway (having previously disposed of its extra session), and, of course, up came the usual financial supply bills, in anticipation of the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1930.

O. K., that was one of the occasions when there was plenty of time to discuss and pass them—nearly seven solid months.

They seldom cause any trouble during those alternate sessions.

But this winter is different—as was the winter of 1928-29 and the winter of 1926-27—and many preceding winters, and as future winters undoubtedly will be until the constitution is changed.

A skimpy three months is not long enough for a session of congress. It especially is not long enough when there is a bitter fight on, as there is this winter, between President Hoover and the senate.

time to stand pat for an extra session will fight it, to be sure.

Therein lies the scheme's uncertainty.

The recalcitrant senators will have to be gagged or they will talk it to death—simply keep on talking in relays up to noon March 4.

By a two-thirds vote the senate can limit debate on any given subject to one hour per senator, or say four or five days of it, for only the bulky senators would be likely to take part in the filibuster.

But is a two-thirds majority available for gag-rule?

Maybe, but it's questionable. Up on that thread hangs the issue of an extra session of congress or a pleasant summer for President Hoover.

Wedding Breakfast
A wedding breakfast is really a luncheon, and a regular luncheon menu is served. A fruit cocktail or clear bouillon for the first course, then creamed chicken in patty cases, parsley butter potatoes, new peas in butter for the second course. A salad may be served if desired, as a separate course, a molded gelatin salad of well-seasoned vegetables, with a rich dressing, would be good. The dessert is usually an ice with small decorated cakes, or the bride's cake, if the breakfast is for few people. Otherwise the bride's cake is cut for only the bride party. Small cakes are served to the rest of the guests. Coffee, iced and tea are complete the menu.

Operation Throws Fight On Germs

—By LOGAN CLUNDENING, M. D.—

The latest report on the end results of the removal of tonsils and adenoids lies before me. The children studied were in three groups. One of 1,000 children had the tonsils and adenoids removed at the age of five or six years. The contrasting group had not had tonsils and adenoids removed. The two groups were examined several times, the last time at high school age. The children all lived in the same city and went to the same schools—climatic and environmental influences, exposure to infection, etc., were the same in the two groups.

The third group consisted of 2,400 children examined three years after tonsillectomy.

The claims made for removal of tonsils and adenoids are that it will tend to prevent rheumatism, head colds, sore throats, will lessen susceptibility to diphtheria and scarlet fever. The further claim is made that it involves little danger and takes nothing away from the child that is needed. The popularity of the procedure is well known. In city populations 50 per cent of children have had the operation. No other medical procedure, with the exception of smallpox and diphtheria vaccination, is so frequently done.

Many of the above claims were apparently substantiated by the survey before me. There was a definite reduction in the number of sore throats. Enlargement of the glands in the neck are much less frequent after the tonsils have been removed. Scarlet fever and diphtheria are less frequent. Rheumatic fever is 30-50 per cent less frequent if tonsils are removed before any attack of rheumatism ever has been experienced. When you consider that rheumatism is the most important cause of heart disease later in life, that is a big item. After an attack of rheumatism removal of tonsils is not likely to lessen the number of recurrences.

The claim that removal of tonsils is entirely without bad results is, however, not entirely true, according to this report. It is generally agreed that sinus disease of the nose is more frequent after the operation. Head colds are much more frequent. This is easy to understand, when it is remembered that the tonsils and adenoids tend to remove germs from the air breathed in. If they are gone this work falls upon the sinuses, which are not entirely adequate to it, and hence easily become infected.

A thing I have long suspected is that infection of the middle ear is more frequent in children whose tonsils and adenoids have been removed. I believe the lack of tonsils and adenoids definitely predisposes to ear infection. The appalling amount of mastoid disease today is certainly greater than it was before tonsils and adenoids were removed so regularly.

Boy Problem Discussed

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

"Dear Virginia Lee: May I ask your advice?"

"I am a girl in high school and very much in love with a boy a year older than myself. My mother and father will not hear of my going out with boys, but I don't want to go out with boys. I just want to go out with this certain one."

"I have been trying to find nerve enough to take him in to meet my parents, and I am afraid my father will embarrass me, also the boy."

"I have a girl friend who is 12 years old, and her mother is altogether different. Right now she is going with a boy who is 17 years old. Every night there are two or three boys over at her house. I feel as though I have just been shut out of the world."

"Do you think there is any harm in my going around with boys?"

"I think I am old enough to take care of myself. I am beginning to think my mother and father are old-fashioned."

LONESOME
You don't say how old you are, Lonesome. I hope you are over 12. Probably the prospect of your emulating this little girl friend of yours, with "two or three boys over at her house" every night, constitutes one of the reasons why you want to, as long as you are not inconvenienced or embarrassed by them. Do you take pains with your appearance and keep up to date so that your young people may be proud of their dad? And don't you think your loneliness and feeling of not being wanted under the circumstances, after all, that is rather important?

I do think a girl in high school should be allowed to bring her schoolmates—both boys and girls—to her home without embarrassment, and be allowed to go to an early show, or a school or young people's party with a boy occasionally, provided she gets home in reasonable time and doesn't have to go to school the next day.

Mothers are usually more amenable to reason on these little matters. Why not have an earnest talk with your mother and ask her to talk it over with your dad and see if you can't bring the boy friend to the house without danger of embarrassment to any one?

And as to the old-fashioned idea. It's not so bad to hold on to a few old standards, even when you are parents. You wouldn't want your mother to be too "modern" would you? I wager you wouldn't exchange them for some very up-to-date older people you know, would you? It's pretty nice to have good parents to look out for you, because, impossible as it may seem, little girls like you don't always have very good judgment, even though they're quite convinced, as you are, that you "are old enough to take care of yourself." Maybe you could manage to have your parents read your letter and my answer.

J. C. I think you should assert yourself in your home with your children, and insist that it is your home and you are going to go where you want to and do what you want to, as long as you are not inconvenienced or embarrassed by them. Do you take pains with your appearance and keep up to date so that your young people may be proud of their dad? And don't you think your loneliness and feeling of not being wanted under the circumstances, after all, that is rather important?

From your description I should say she was not a suitable person to make you happy, and you would be lonelier than ever if you married her. If the children continue to treat you so inconsiderately, however, you certainly will be justified in looking for another companion.

Don't Be Over-zealous

—By GLADYS GLAD—

Of course we'd all like to have our little daughters grow up to look like the Mary Pickfords, the Janet Gaynors, or the Evelyn Layes. And we want to do all that we can to insure future beauty for our youngsters. But some women are so zealous about their efforts to beautify their offspring that they sometimes actually do them harm.

To be over-zealous in caring for a child's natural beauty may be just as disastrous as to be neglectful of it.

There are things that every mother may do for her little girl with perfect safety, such as keeping the hair well brushed and immaculate. . . . Selecting properly fitting shoes and caring for the child's foot health. . . . Cleaning the teeth frequently. . . . Trimming the finger nails correctly. . . . Bathing the child regularly to insure healthy skin. But to go beyond these necessities is oftentimes to court trouble.

If you are desirous that the child have long lashes, perhaps the careful use of a bit of plain vaseline on the lashes may not prove harmful. But you must always take into consideration that a child's skin is much tender than an adult's, and if the vaseline causes any soreness or swelling of the lids, its use must be foregone. Nine times out of 10 the eyelids of children are too sensitive for such treatment.

For the average child, absolute cleanliness and strict attention to diet, with attention to details mentioned above, will prove sufficient to assure beauty that it will take a long time to destroy.

Children need more parental vigilance when they begin to do their own bathing, shampooing and manicuring, than at any other time. For the youngsters are so busy getting acquainted with the world that they are likely to neglect themselves. And it's up to

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Astringent
Mrs. R. L. S.: The astringent you refer to is made by dissolving two teaspoons of boric acid in a pint of boiling water and when cool, adding to this solution an equal amount of witch hazel. Lotion is generally of a thicker consistency than the cream you mention.

Sensitive Skin
B. E.: Lemon juice is primarily a skin bleach, rather than an astringent. An excellent astringent for a sensitive skin can be made of equal parts of rose water, glycerine and witch hazel.

Scars
Discouraged: For effective eradication, scars should be attended to in their early stages. I would advise you to consult a skin specialist as soon as possible about the marks on your face.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin for each, to cover cost of printing and handling. For the articles on "Care of the Hands and Nails" and "Care of the Feet and Legs," two cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope are required. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's column.

Recently, if you remember, or whether you remember or not, we tried in our small way to call attention to the genius of George Haller as a trainer. By vocation a shoe salesman but at heart a chiropractor or a first cousin to this species, George has since told us that he picked up most of his knowledge or bones of the human body by a correspondence.

George did not exactly take a correspondence course, but he became deeply interested in physical culture and sent away for a book on the subject. He studied the volume and what he had assimilated in theory he later had numerous opportunities to put into practice from time to time in healing wounded basketball and football heroes of high schools, colleges and other athletes in this locality.

George is a human X-ray machine when it comes to diagnosing injuries.

The most difficult assignment he has ever had was presented by Joe Smith's trick knees, which had a tendency to fly out of place now and then. This dislocation was peculiar because it would fly out of joint sideways, unlike the case of Sam Huston.

Captain "Pinkie" Wilson was sending his Buccaneers cage squad through its paces one afternoon this week. Time after time he cautioned the players to arch the ball when shooting.

That evening "Pinkie" played with the Lang Chevrolet Falcons in a game against the Springfield Kibler Clothes.

The Buccaneers toed the seven-foot line to shoot a couple of free throws after being fouled.

After he missed the first throw, "Red" Hook, a little shaver who is a freshman member of the Xenia court squad, shouted sympathetically from the side lines: "Arch the ball higher, coach! We forget whether 'Pinkie' followed this excellent advice, but anyhow he made good the second try.

Among sure signs of spring noticed this week are these:

Lou Cleveland, dean of Greene County sportsmen, wheeling himself around the business district one balmy afternoon, shaking hands with friends, marking his first venture down town since the election.

A couple of youngsters engaged in a game of marbles on Home Ave., whether for "keeps" or just "funnies" not being certain.

The second-place Schmidt Oil Co. bowling team, although winning two out of three games from the Red Wing Co. in a Recreation League match Thursday night, lost ground in its race to overhaul the league-leading Gr. Co. L. Co. quintet and is now three instead of two full games behind.

GAMES POSTPONED

Because of the continued epidemic of mumps in the Xenia city grade schools the intra-city grade school basketball loop will again be idle Saturday morning.

The games have been postponed for the last three weeks but it is expected that play will be resumed next week.

The epidemic started at Spring Hill but now is prevalent at McKinley School. Nothing of a serious nature has developed as yet but school officials do not wish to take any chances.

Locals Lose After Four Overtime Periods

ST. BRIGID OUTFIT DROPS NARROW TILT TO URBANA QUINTET

Second Free Throw Period Results In 17 To 16 Victory

BY BIRCH BELL

LAYING a return game on the Central High School floor the St. Brigid High School basketball team lost a hard fought battle to St. Mary's High of Urbana 17 to 16 after four overtime periods of overtime play Thursday night.

The score at the end of the regulation time stood at twelve all. A short rest period was given the players after which a three minute overtime period was played. The score remained the same during this period as neither team scored. Another three minute period was played and again the score was tied, neither team contributed a point during the period. According to the Ohio High School Athletic Association ruling both teams are then allowed five shots from the charity line, each player getting one shot, the team making the most being the winner. Both teams tried and again proved equal, three shots being made by each team. Another three period was played and this time St. Mary's proved superior, throwing in two out of the five while the local lads contributed but one, that by Murray.

The game was a seesaw affair, first one team obtaining the lead and then the other, although the St. Mary's held a slight edge during the second and third periods. The score at the half gave the Urbana lads a 9 to 7 advantage and this they held during the third period which ended 11 to 9. Murray started things going for the evening by making a neat shot shortly after the opening tip-off. The visiting center took this as an insult and came right back with a "sucker" shot to knot the count. The Xenia basketekers went ahead momentarily at this period by virtue of a field goal by Murray and a field goal by King, elongated center of the locals. However, the visitors came back again just before the close of the first quarter and registered a foul and a field goal to knot the count at five even before the whistle blew.

In the next session St. Mary's outscored the St. Brigid boys by one field goal. Each team contributed two fouls during this period but the local lads could not connect from the field and so were trailing 9 to 7 at the close of the first half.

Urbana added two points to this total during the third period by means of a field goal by Mott, stellar center. Zenni, fleet forward for the local team also contributed a field goal during this period to bring the score up to 11 to 9 for the visitors at the close of the third period. In the fourth quarter Nylan, visiting guard, sank a free throw for his team while Zenni came through for the St. Brigid quintet with a fielder and a charity shot to knot the count at the end of the regulation playing time.

Both teams wasted chances to win the game during the two overtime periods by missing easy "set up" shots near the basket.

The St. Brigid boys showed quite an improvement over their play in the first meeting of the two teams. Fletcher was the only player banished from the game by the personal foul route, he being lost to the locals late in the first half.

Zenni was the leading scorer for the local team beside playing a hard floor game and directing his team's offense. He registered seven points and was followed closely by Murray with five. Mott, center, was the leading threat in the offense of the visitors and scored 7 points. Each team registered four field goals, while the visitors proved superior at the foul line counting 9 to 8 in this respect.

STATE OFFICER OF LODGE HEARD HERE

John Shippers, Dayton, district deputy grand master of the I. O. O. F. Lodge, was guest speaker at a "father and son" banquet, sponsored by members of Xenia Lodge, No. 52, I. O. O. F., at their hall on W. Main St., Thursday night. The affair was in celebration of the birthday of Thomas Wildy, founder of the order.

Mr. Shippers spoke on the founding of the lodge and also discussed the principles of the order. Several members spoke on "Why I Am an Odd Fellow." Members of the drill team from the Wilmington lodge staged a uniformed drill during the evening.

A banquet was served later in the evening to 150 guests. Music for the entertainment was furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Carroll Breakfield. Arrangements for the affair were in charge of a committee of which the Rev. W. H. Tilford was chairman.

CHICAGO GIRLS' TEAM WILL PLAY HERE

The famous Keefe-Allen girls' basketball team from Dayton, substituting for the Xenia Pennsy girls' quintet, will engage the Pennsy Railroad's General Office team of Chicago, Ill., in the preliminary of a double-header basketball attraction at the stadium here Saturday night this week.

The Xenia Pennsy feminine team has been temporarily wrecked by illness of three regular players and the fact Elizabeth Wein-gard, individual star of the team, has a sprained ankle, the injury being suffered in a game this week. As a result Coach Paul Fuller completed arrangements to have the noted Dayton girls' team appear here to play the equally noted Chicago lasses.

The Dayton team is admittedly the outstanding one in this locality and recently defeated the Kelly Kolleens by a one-sided score at Dayton.

The outstanding member of the Windy City team is Frances Lambert, high scoring star.

FIVE DAIRYMEN OF GREENE COUNTY TO RECEIVE REWARDS

Five Greene County dairymen will become members of the Ohio Dairy Club and be awarded gold medals in recognition of their accomplishments at the Ohio Dairy Club banquet at the Ohio State University Wednesday evening of "Farmers' Week." The banquet will be held at Pomeroy Hall at 6:30 p. m. and the program, besides the giving of awards, will consist of music and speeches.

These dairymen are all members of the Greene County Dairy Herd Improvement Association whose herds produced an average of 400 pounds or more of butterfat for the year. Those receiving gold medals were: N. L. and Paul Ramsey, Cedarville, whose herd of eleven cows gave an average production of 433 pounds of butterfat for the year; F. E. Wilson, seven cows averaged 429 pounds of butterfat; L. H. Hartley herd of fifteen cows averaged 408 pounds; J. O. St. John herd of fifteen cows averaged 401 pounds and Venus B. Ary herd of eleven cows averaged 400 pounds.

TWELVE BAPTIZED AT SERVICES HERE

"Many people want salvation but try to bribe God to save them," the Rev. J. B. Holloway said at evangelistic services at the First Baptist Church Thursday evening. He used the story of the leper who tried to purchase a cure with silver and gold as the basis of his sermon. "The only way to receive salvation is to accept God's plan by exercising faith and obedience," he concluded.

Twelve candidates were baptized at the services Thursday evening. Special music was furnished by the Victory Chorus of Dayton, under the direction of L. W. Martin. Mr. Martin sang several songs and Ray Frost sang a solo of his own composition.

The Rev. Mr. Holloway will preach on "Our Sin Bearer" at services Friday evening. He will preach at both services Sunday which will bring to a close the series of evangelistic meetings.

P. T. A. WILL SEEK JAIL IMPROVEMENT

Petitions urging that conditions in the women's detention room at the Greene County jail be improved are to be circulated among members of the Parent-Teacher Association of city schools following action taken at a meeting of Xenia council, P. T. A., at Central High School Thursday afternoon.

The P. T. A. council is cooperating in this work with Mrs. John Baughn, matron of the jail, and Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson of the juvenile court. In a short talk Mrs. Anderson described the conditions of the room and the improvements needed. The petitions will be presented to county commissioners after they are signed.

Mrs. C. E. Kendall, Cleveland, past president of the state P. T. A., will address members of P. T. A. of the city at an open meeting in February. It was announced, Mrs. Kendall will speak on "Ohio Race Betterment."

GREENE COUNTIANS WILL BE SPEAKERS

O. A. Dobbins, master farmer of Cedarville, and J. R. Kimber, manager of the Steele Farm of Xenia are listed as speakers on the annual Farmers' Week program at Ohio State University the week of February 2-6.

Mr. Dobbins will speak Tuesday at 10 o'clock on "Essentials in the Selection, Management and Marketing of Purchased Hogs." Mr. Kimber will lead the discussion Thursday at 2 p. m. on "What a Farmer Must Do To Get Better Returns in Marketing His Livestock."

By BONITA WITT
Central Press Staff Writer

POMEROY, O., Jan. 30.—Crossword puzzles have lost their vogue in Pomeroy. The village fathers, their wives and offspring have no time for such trivial pastime. They're too busy figuring out ways to spend $375,000 willed the community by the late Wyatt G. Plantz, 57, town banker.

Plantz, wealthy eccentric, who knew only a bare handful of his neighbors intimately, gave the money to the village without any strings attached. Just as soon as Claude E. Gillilan, cashier of the Plantz bank, gets around to administering the estate, arguments will begin. Every one of Pomeroy's 4,000 odd residents has at least one idea as to how the money should be spent, and most of them have several.

Virtually everyone agrees that the thing to do is pay off the municipal indebtedness of $140,406.37 first. Its remaining sum that is causing all the excitement.

A few of the ideas. Some folk believe a city hall should be erected to honor Plantz. Others desire better street lights, improved water front along the or drainage system. The 74-year-old mayor, C. J. Hess, thinks a new waterworks is the crying need. Seated at a window in the city hall, feet propped on a ledge, a "thriller" magazine in his lap, Hess points to a water hydrant and says, "That thing costs us $75 a year and some of the hydrants haven't been opened in years. It's sip has it. Gillilan, himself, tells that he once resigned from the bank because he thought he was not being paid enough. A friend persuaded him to return, saying, "Wyatt Plantz will take care of you." Convinced of his mistake, Gillilan returned to the bank twenty minutes after he had quit.

Plantz did take care of him—to the extent of approximately $100,000. The spacious Plantz home, the bank and other holdings were willed to Gillilan. Never in their long years of close association had Plantz so much as intimated to his assistant that he some day would reward him for his faithful services. In recent years because of poor health, Plantz had come more and more to rely upon Gillilan.

During Plantz' lifetime and that of his father the First City bank of Pomeroy never had a name on its windows or door, and Gillilan says it won't have a sign as long he is president. Once when Plantz was asked the reason for the bare windows, he said, "I won't ask anybody for his pocketbook." It used to be known as "The Bank Without a Name" and received many letters addressed thus. Neither does the bank have bars. One walks up to the marble counter and carries on his transaction just as he would in any store. Incidentally many of the newer banks have discarded grilles windows.

A Stranger All His Life. Although all of Pomeroy probably has banked at the Plantz institution at one time or another, few knew Wyatt Plantz intimately. Until his mother's death, Plantz always had lived with her in a big house within sight of the Ohio river. He rarely missed a meeting of his high school alumni association, and was prominent in the Masonic lodge, yet there were few of its members who really felt intimately acquainted with him.

Townpeople used to think Plantz stingy because he never owned an automobile and spent little for amusement. Although he walked beautifully, Wyatt Plantz was never considered as much of a beau and never was known to keep what along the Ohio river as known as "steady company."

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

Everyone ought to do his part in lifting the ideals and practices of a community to higher levels. Moral progress depends upon the exercise of the lifting power.

Reforms, benevolent and philanthropic causes are demonstrations of lifting power exercised in individuals. Our country and the world needs more and more that sort of lifting power.

The question to be settled is that of developing this power. The church is the one institution that has given origin and championed reform movements and philanthropies which is evidence that there is provided in the church the necessary lifting power.

To be a dead weight morally is to evade the church. To be a lifting power is to be a faithful attendant at church. Why not go to church next Sunday?—D. Carl Yoder.

Creamed Comments

On S. S. Lesson

W. H. Tilford, Pastor

Luke expresses the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount by practical examples of the teachings of Jesus. Jesus would saturate society with the spirit of love. This is a long process but progress is made when viewed by centuries.

Vs. 27, 28. "But I say unto you that they shall be your enemies, do good to them that hate you, Bless them that curse you, pray for them that despitefully use you." One may not have for his enemies the same affection that he has for his friends but one is to have the spirit of goodwill that seeks to do the best thing for them and to remove offenses and restore mutual faith and fellowship.

V. 29. "To him that smiteth thee on one cheek offer also the other; and from him that taketh away thy cloak, withhold not thy coat also." We ought to prefer bearing patiently with injustices. Only for moral purposes does a true disciple of Christ appeal to law.

V. 31. "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." Actions and conduct are determined by wisdom.

V. 32-34. "And if ye love them that love you, what thank have ye? For even sinners love those that love them. And if ye do good to them that do good to you, what thanks have ye? For even sinners do the same. And if ye lend to them from whom you hope to receive, what thanks have ye? For even sinners lend to them to whom they hope to receive. But love your enemies, and do good to them and lend, expecting nothing in return, and your reward shall be great; for ye shall be sons of the most high; for he is kind to the unthankful and evil." Our great reward is to be the sons of God; and sons are like their father.

V. 36. "Be ye merciful, even as your father is merciful." God's mercy and nothing else is to be the measure and pattern of ours.

V. 37. "And judge not, and ye shall not be judged; and condemn not, and ye shall be condemned; release and ye shall be released." We are not forbidden to form opinions regarding others.

ROME, Jan. 29.—Official circles allowed it to be understood today that Premier Mussolini and other officials of the Italian government are gratified over the prompt apology by the United States government for the alleged slighting remarks about Premier Mussolini made by Major General Smedley D. Butler.

It is generally believed that the incident, so far as the Italian government is concerned is now closed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—President Hoover himself was the moving force behind the court martial that has been ordered for Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, U. S. Marine Corps, by the House of Representatives.

Butler was charged with "a hit and run driver," according to reliable authority today.

The question of what was to be done about Gen. Butler's case was discussed at some length at Tuesday's cabinet meeting, with Mr. Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson inclined to view the matter in a more serious light than among other members of the cabinet.

All naval and military precedent favored a reprimand, for never before, so far as the records show, has a high-ranking officer of either the army or navy been given a general court martial for diplomatic remarks concerning an official of a friendly nation. Not a few officers have been reprimanded, and in some cases demoted, but none has ever been dealt with so drastically as the administration now proposes to deal with Butler.

The belief is general in service quarters that the case means the end of Gen. Butler's long and spectacular career in the Marine Corps, a career that has brought him two congressional medals of honor, and not a little notoriety of less desirable sort.

A THRILLING MYSTERY STORY + by MILES BURTON

READ THIS FIRST:

The famous diamond necklace of Lady Hardway is stolen by Thomas Herriage, a notorious crook, in London. Sinking along the street after the robbery, Herriage is accosted by two men, who handcuff him, take him to Scotland Yard for questioning. On the way, the burglar suddenly leaps out of the car and escapes into the fog. To free himself of the handcuffs, Herriage makes for the home of Ginger Murdock, another crook. He stumbles into a policeman. Herriage explains the handcuffs by saying he had worn them on a bet. The policeman, however, takes him to a police station. A sergeant there does not recognize him. Herriage tells a story of having a wife and children in Wigan, a suburb, although his dialect is London cockney. The sergeant summons Inspector Brooks, who recognizes Herriage. Later Dick Penhampton is called to the Scotland Yard office of Sir Edric Conway, assistant police commissioner, to tell of the robbery to Inspector Brooks. Dick is Lord Hardway's brother-in-law. Inspector Brooks requests of Sir Edric the right to question Dick and Herriage in jail. Brooks determines to run down some clues.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 7

It was early yet, too early for the work Inspector Brooks had planned for himself. He walked on slowly, until he came to the entrance of London Dock. Here he passed again, looking on the low wall which guarded the lock gates. On his right was the river, a constellation of lights; the red and green side lights of the unnumbered craft which filled the Pool of London. On his left was the dock, a placid sheet of ebony colored water, from which towered up a forest of tapering masts, faintly seen as a delicate tracery against the dim light of the sky.

It seemed to him as though the sea with all its mystery had thrust an intruding arm into the reluctant dominion of the land, crushing back before it all the crowded buildings, in the faint light, growing ever fainter, this dark illimitable expanse might have been some secret land-locked harbor, where weary silent ships might find their resting-place.

Brooks pulled out his watch and sighed. Time was creeping on, his romance, but with the men who tolled and plotted unseen in the maze of narrow streets which spread away for miles north and south of the river. He walked briskly on into Wapping High Street, until he came to a small and unpretentious public house, where the expected sign of the Margate Jetty.

The windows of the bar were so low that he had no difficulty in looking down through them at the group round the counter. He sauntered past the place, his quick eyes scanning the customers within. He recognized some of them, and grunted softly with satisfaction. Then he turned sharply down a narrow alleyway, which ended in a flight of steps leading down into the turbid waters of the river.

He stood here for a few minutes, gazing abstractedly across the opposite shore. The dim form of a motor-launch swept swiftly past him, cleaving the water silently and making a wash which broke on the steps at his feet in a series of miniature waves. A police launch, bound on the same errand as himself, the protection of the millions to whom crime and criminals were as some romantic survival of the Middle Ages.

Smiled. Precious "romance" about "the" a policeman, if at all, the truth were known. Danger perhaps; it was the spice of danger that alone made tolerable the long hours of weary vigil. But romance, no.

With a shrug of his shoulders he cast these discursive thoughts behind him, and became once more the single-minded searcher for information. He turned on his heel and made his way back to the Margate Jetty, entering it by a narrow door upon which was displayed the legend "Saloon Bar."

He wished a cheery good evening to the group of men assembled there and walked up to the counter, behind which was sitting by a cheerful fire, engaged upon some complicated exercises with a croquet book.

She looked up a she approached. "Good evening," she said brightly. "You don't mind if I finish my row, do you?"

"Hand it over and I'll finish it for you," replied Brooks. "A little variation in the pattern wouldn't hurt."

"Here you are then," said the girl, passing him the work. "Coo, if I couldn't crochet any faster than that, I shouldn't have anything to wear! No, top it! Take care, you'll drop all the stitches!" She snatched it back from him and put it aside. "There, you don't catch me letting you have that again," she said. "The usual?"

Brooks nodded, and she put up a foaming glass of beer before him. He nodded to her, drank a few mouthfuls and retired to a corner of the room. The Margate Jetty was more like an old-fashioned inn in the heart of the country than a London public house. The low and blackened ceiling was traversed by old oak beams, and the room was lighted by a couple of dim gas lights. Queer old prints shared the wall space with flaring advertisements of beer and cigarettes. The partition separating the saloon from the public bar was so low that, when standing up, Brooks could see over it without difficulty.

A single glance at the company told him all he wished to know. The group of men in the saloon were obviously the skippers of barges, squat, muffled men, who said little and absorbed their beer as though it were some solemn rite. In the public bar was a more nondescript collection; a couple of watermen, a few dock laborers and a sprinkling of lorry-drivers, waiting until it was time to go on night-shift. Four of these were playing darts to the accompaniment of much ribald chaff and the strains of an ancient gramophone.

Brooks glanced at the clock. It was barely eight o'clock. He sat quietly in his corner for a while, then approached the counter once more and beckoned to the girl. "I say, is the guv'nor in this evening?"

She glanced at him swiftly. "Yes, do you want to see him?" she replied.

Brooks nodded, and without a word she lifted the flap of the counter and let him through. He passed down a short passage and opened the door of a small room, in which was a heavy, jovial-looking man, reading the racing columns of an evening paper. "Good evening, Mr. Hopkins," said the Inspector.

"Why, good-evening, Mr. Brooks," exclaimed the man warmly. "Haven't seen you for weeks. Going to have a drink?"

"I've just had one outside, thanks," replied Brooks. "I was just wondering if I might sit in the old place for a bit. By the way, was Pussy Herriage in here last night?"

"Pussy? No, I haven't seen him since the night before last," replied Mr. Hopkins. "He was some of his pals in yesterday though. Of course, you can sit where you like, Mr. Brooks."

"Right, I'll find my way, don't you worry," said the Inspector. He picked up a chair and opened a door at the far end of the room. It led into a dark cupboard, but as soon as the door was opened, the noise of voices in the bar became suddenly distinct. Brooks entered the cupboard, shut the door behind him and sat himself down on the chair he had brought with him.

He had discovered this point of vantage years ago, when he was a sergeant in this district. The cupboard was used as a larder, and at some time, to give it ventilation, a series of holes had been pierced in the wooden partition which divided it from an alcove leading to the bar. The partition had subsequently been papered over on the bar side, which rendered the holes useless for ventilation purposes, without interfering with the value of the cupboard as a sound box.

The minutes passed very slowly in that confined space, until the Inspector began to fear that he was to be disappointed. This, he knew, was not the sole, though the favorite, rendezvous of the gang of which he suspected Pussy Herriage to be a member, but the entrance of the door of the alcove, and the sound of voices, would mean the end of his listening.

Brooks could hear every word of their conversation, although it was carried on in subdued tones. The language they used was a queer argot, wholly incomprehensible to the ordinary person, but clear as crystal to the experienced Inspector. He smiled grimly once or twice and stored away a stray fact or two, which might some day be put to a useful purpose, in his retentive memory. But for a while he heard no word of what he had come to learn.

The name came out suddenly in a pause in the conversation. "Pussy's late," said a laconic voice. "Oh, he'll turn up, you bet," said another reassuringly. "He got the goods all right. Didn't you see the news in the paper? Baring hardway in Mayfair, famous Hardway case, and is frequently called the 'White Knight' soda fountain of opal glass in black and white will be installed and year-around fountain service provided. Operation of the new store will lean toward the ethical side of pharmacy rather than to the theory of sidelines, and when Mr. Donges' son joins the firm, three registered pharmacists will be available on the store staff."

The Kroger store will vacate the room immediately after Feb. 1, but the drug store will not be moved until the new room has been prepared for occupancy. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Donges are now moving to Xenia from Akron.

the guts. He wouldn't dare double-cross us like that."

"No, but there's another said the previous speaker were not the only ones on our eyes on that job."

"There was a faint rumble of men drew closer together in a whisper so faint that could scarcely hear the voice continued: 'Pussy against it. I didn't say for fear he would get it and back out. But I know. There was some of after the Hardway diamond night, and when that bloke a thing, he usually gets it.' 'Who'd you mean?' whispered voice anxiously."

"Why, the Funny Toff, who else?" was the reply which thrilled Inspector Brooks to the very center of his being.

DONGES DRUG STORE REMOVAL PLANNED; EXPAND INTERESTS

Donges Sr. has operated a drug business, nearly thirty-one years, having come here from Hamilton in July of 1900. His removal to the building he owns will dispossess the branch store of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Co., there, which was the first store established by that company here and is the oldest of the chain in the city.

The new room has a depth of ninety-seven feet and a width of nineteen feet, and will be completely remodelled, including installation of a modern front with center entrance and two display windows. All new walnut drug store fixtures, on the modern theory of sales tables eliminating show cases, will be installed in place of the present equipment and the candy and tobacco cases will be the only show cases in the store. The optical department will be separated by partitions from the sales floor, and will include a reception room, refracting room and grinding room; the department doing its own grinding of lenses. A new "White Knight" soda fountain of opal glass in black and white will be installed and year-around fountain service provided. Operation of the new store will lean toward the ethical side of pharmacy rather than to the theory of sidelines, and when Mr. Donges' son joins the firm, three registered pharmacists will be available on the store staff.

states attorney and partner of Lincoln's former law partner. Masters practices law in Chicago and is frequently called the poet of the Middlewest.

"The Middlewest was changed sharply from the days of my youth," said Masters. "Where once one lived simply, comfortably and enjoyably in a small community, the Middlewest is now metropolitanized and the small communities are being absorbed."

"The Middlewest has lost its individuality and its home life. People used to talk to each other, to sit down at a good book or visit for mutual entertainment."

"Now they rush out to an auto ride, dash off to a movie, or sit silently before the radio and listen to what everybody else is listening to throughout the country at the same time."

"What America needs is intellectual progress rather than further physical and mechanical progress. We have catered to the physical enough and now should begin catering to the mind."

"Americans could learn much from knowing something of the time of Confucius. The Chinese at that time had culture with industrial progress. And the greatest lesson of all is that they believed in peace."

The Masters puffed his pipe. There was a twinkle in his kindly eyes, as they say in interviews.

"But things are much better off than they used to be," he said.

The Theater

Another episode in the turbulent career of Mary Nolan is closed with the failure of Universal to take up its option on the blonde star's contract.

Back in the days when she was Imogene Wilson of the stage, the actress crashed the front pages through her chagrin against Frank Tinney, one-time blackface stage comedian, who has been living in obscurity several years following a physical collapse.

Fleeing from this reputation, she took her beauty and her legitimate talent to Germany, where she became Mary Nolan and made pictures for the famous Ufa company. John Costline, then, United Artists' executive, discovered her and signed her to come to Hollywood.

MARY NOLAN

She appeared in "Sorrel and Son" and shortly afterward left United Artists to sign with Universal.

That was almost three years ago. During this time, Miss Nolan has repeatedly demonstrated her ability and glamor, but has had a succession of ill health and had publicity breaks. News of her departure from the Laemmle Studio came as a surprise, as she had been announced for "Waterloo Bridge", Robert Sherwood's play of last season. Her future plans are unknown.

Thought she still is in the midst of her comedy, "It's a Wise Child", Marion Davies already is considering the possibilities of following up almost immediately with another picture.

The Cosmopolitan star has been busy in the last few months. She completed "The Bachelor Father", which is considered her best talkie to date, and soon afterwards began rehearsals for her current vehicle. The name of her next picture has not been announced.

Since the days of "The Miracle"

Man," no single film has built up more reputations than Pathe's "Her Man," which was one of the season's best pictures. The old George Loane Tucker picture sent Betty Compson, Thomas Meighan and Lon Chaney soaring to film fame. "Her Man" won Helen Twelvetrees the title role in "Millie," caused Marjorie Rambeau to be signed for Metro's "Min and Bill," probably was responsible for Philip Holmes' selection to play the lead in "An American Tragedy" and gave Ricardo Cortez such a boost that he has been engaged to be Bebe Daniels' leading man in "The Maltese Falcon."

The cast of Charles Rogers' production of "The Registered Woman," so far includes Zasu Pitts, well known as a picture stealer and the reliable H. B. Warner. The story concerns a demi-mondaine, and is by John Farrow.

CENTRAL DEBATERS
LOSE TWO MATCHES
IN SCHOOL LEAGUE

Xenia Central High debaters lost their second match in as many days when the negative team of London High School won a close decision over the affirmative debate team of Central in Jean B. Elwell auditorium Thursday afternoon. Xenia negative debaters lost to Marysville high affirmative debaters at Marysville Wednesday afternoon. This decision was also by a close margin.

Superintendent of Schools Louis Hammerie presided over the debate Thursday afternoon with London. Lois Spahr, Central affirmative debater, was the first speaker. Margaret Cummings, of the negative team, followed her in her opening speech. Charles Adair spoke for the Xenia team next and was followed by Robert Weimer of the opposition. Anita Cherry was last speaker for the Central team and Annabelle Chandler wound up the opening speeches with a ten minute oration. The teams were given a brief period of rest in order to prepare their rebuttal speeches and two members from each side were heard during rebuttal. Five minutes were given to each speaker. At the close of the rebuttal speeches G. Vernon Kelly, of Wittenberg College, awarded the decision to the London team and gave a brief comment on the match.

John Beaham, Lois Spahr, and Lester Price represented the Xenia team in the Marysville debate match Wednesday afternoon. The senior high school attended the London debate match Thursday afternoon on the subject, Resolved: Chain stores are detrimental to the best interests of the United States public.

OLD "GRASSHOPPER"
LINE IS ABANDONED

This week marked the passing of the "grasshopper" railroad, which passed through the southern part of Greene County. The D. T. and I. Railroad Co., present owners of the line, recently made application to the Interstate Commerce Commission to abandon the line and this request was granted.

The "grasshopper" line was built in 1893 from Port William to Kingman. At that time it was used in transporting grain to the elevators but with the advent of automobiles the railroad became less prosperous. The rails of the road will soon be torn up.

GRANGE MASTER IS HEARD AT MEETING

Walter F. Kirk, Port Clinton, O., state master of the Ohio Grange, gave an interesting address on "A Home for Agriculture" before Greene County Pomona Grange at Grange Hall, Jamestown, Wednesday. "The four walls of the home of agriculture are production, education, good government and organization. These are covered by the roof, fraternity, which is symbolic of the grange," he said. Ray Krug, J. H. Mossman and Mr. Pawcett were appointed members of a committee in charge of grange exhibits at the Greene County fair. A business meeting occupied the morning session and a covered dish dinner was served to 200 people at noon.
